“Acting Up Stage Company’s production is the most satisfying, fulfilling, beautifully performed piece of musical theatre I’ve seen in this city for a long time.”

— Toronto Star

“The most uplifting, life-affirming musical in Toronto is one in which each of its 18 songs is an elegy for the dead and gone.”

— The Globe and Mail

“Friends and colleagues of the composer’s who have died over the last two decades are resurrected in playful lyrics bursting with internal rhymes that remember them in all their quirky vitality.”

— The New York Times
